

IF YOU ARE PREGNANT, GETTING H1N1 COULD BE RISKY FOR YOU AND YOUR BABY.

ASK YOUR DOCTOR ABOUT H1N1 VACCINATION.

Pregnant women face a higher risk of flu-related complications. Their babies are also at risk of developing complications such as premature birth.

If you are pregnant, check with your doctor on getting the H1N1 vaccination.

The H1N1 vaccine will be available at all Polyclinics. You can also check with your family doctor whether the vaccine is available at their clinic.
